HARRY COVERDALE'S COURTSHIP,

AND WHAT CAME OF IT

While the tea for her solitary breakfast was drawing, Alice, having no one else to look at, amused herself by regarding her own natural (no term confid be more appropriate) face in a large pier-glass, and was quite startled to behold the unmistakably cross exprocesion which characterized it. Taking berself to task for this, she, sipping her tea, which did not taste nearly so owed as when Harry was at home, mentally decided that she was very nere asonable, and childish, and ridic-ulous; that when Harry had been devoting himself for the last monti- to her pleasure and amusement going to balls and all sorts of places which he did not care a pin about, solely to please her, it was borribly selfish in her to grudge him a few hours to devote to a favorite per-uit; though how men could find delight in killing those poor birds, she could not tell. She did not so much wonder about other people ; she believed men were gen erally eruel; but Harry was so and usually kind-hearted—she supposed it: must be the excitement, and the b wetful scenery, and the interest in watering those dear clever dogs stick out t their long tails to point at the partridge. es with, which, looking at it in a Chesterfieldian point of view, was decidedly impolite, if not positively rude, of them; and yet she had heard gentleman talk about their sporting dogs being so well-bred. Having thus reasoned herself into a wiser frame of mind, she resolved to make the best of it, and suddenly resol-feeting she had at least a thousand things to do, which she was putting asile till some time or rather when Harry should be out, she decided, that this was the time, and that now or never must they all be done. Accordingly, she set vigorously to work, and wrote three letters one after another, to three former school-fellows, wherein she described her husband as a species of modern demigod, compounded of equal parts of Solomon and Adonis, with a dash of Accilles thrown in to do justice to his heroic qualities; and deputed matrimonial cicity in such glowing colors, Unc the richest and prettiest of her correspondents cloped the next week with her dancing-mater; and one of the others, who was neither rich nor protty, turned pious out of suite, and went into a sort of High Chu ch Protestant numery-and-water, to punish the men whom, it must be confessed, appeared to about to the trial with the most cheeful resignation. Then Alice brought out a large roll at tills, and a thick housekeeping book, ruled with bine lines, and baying a besiness-like smell of new leather about the binding which Alice flattered herself would impress even the stately housekeeper (who was old enough to be her mother, and stiff enough for anything, and of whom Alice in her secret soul stood very much in dread) with a deep sense of her being a very dragon of housewitery, prepared to be down open the slightest attempt at peculation like an avenging fury, But the bills were so complicated, and never would add up twice alcke, and the butcher was so inconsistent and suppery about his prices, sometimes charging 7 d. and sometimes 7-1-2d., as if once a pound of mutton, always a pound of mutton' were not an incontrover ible axiom: and the baker was as had, besides choosing to spell dough, d. e. e. which at first made her think that he was the botcher, and sold venison; and the hams seemed always to come from the tallowebandler's, with the candles, which wasn't by any means an agreeable association of ideas; and the footman was svidently of Esquienaux descent, and lived samptionally used lamped 8s, the gallon; and the conclusion appeared to feed the carriage-horses upon sponges, wash-'cather, and retten-stone which she was size could not be good for them; and set:

P., and that for the future she should resign the glory of managing the housekeepers-book to Mrs. Gripples, and r strict her department to the equally dignified, but less onerous, duty of making Harry sign the cheques, and handing them over to that angust domestic to pay the tills with. To be continued.

The Pacific wagon road has been finished During the Summer some 1,500 wagons, 12,000 head of cattle and about 4,000 persons have passed over it. Grass, wood and water are found aboundarly along the entire roote. It commences at the South Page leaving the Sage Plains to the South-west; and, going directly through the Wasatch Mountains by way of Thon-psou's Pass, crosses the head waters of Bear and Great Snake Rivers.

SOLE IMPORTERS, No. 338 Broadway, N. Y.

This DELICIOUS TONIC

especially designed for the use of the Medical Profession and the Family, possesses those intrinsic medicinal properties (Tonic and Diarctic) which belong to an Old and PURE GIN. The business of manufacturing spurious gins, and offering them as boverages, under the titles, "Aromatic,"—"Cordial,"—"Medicated," etc., has become so common, that the publie are justly suspicious of nearly everything that is offered under similar forms, and the trade has thus been brought into disrepute It has remained for our house (established in 1778) to supply the pressing popular need, and to inaugurate a new era in the history of the Trade. We frust that our established reputation — founded upon eighty years of experience -- abundantly vindicates our claim to public confidence.

TY. A. A. Comparison of "Bininger's Oil London Dock Gla" with others bearing similar names, will establish its superiorly, and make other Caurion ununcessary.
